

Get to know the Field Guide

Design accessible career and networking events

What it means

Adapt and develop campus career and networking events to make them more inclusive for students with disabilities.

What it achieves

Making events attractive to students with disabilities leads to greater numbers of students taking part and moving forward on their individual employment pathways.

What you get

- Guides and checklists to plan and execute inclusive and accessible events.
- Poster templates to market events.
- Emails for pre- and post-event engagement.
- Post-event survey templates.

We've implemented some of the best practices into our annual career fair. We're going to have more questions around accommodations on our registration forms; we're going to have a quiet space for students; and we're going to start the career fair an hour early just for students with disabilities, so they have access to employers in a less stimulating and over-crowded environment.

- Jessica Andrews, Algonquin College